

South African Spirits Market

Investment Diligence Dashboard

TOPIC AND MOTIVATION

A Private Equity deal team is evaluating the acquisition of a South African spirits producer. The target is a multi-category distiller with brands across brandy, whiskies, gin, vodka and liqueurs.

This dashboard compresses Euromonitor and IWSR market data into a single interactive view, enabling the Investment Committee to assess whether the South African spirits market is structurally attractive and where value is migrating.

Business Questions & How They Are Addressed

01 VOLUME TREND

Which categories dominate volume and how is the mix changing?

Multi-line chart tracking volume by spirits sub-category from 2014 to 2024. White Spirits is the only growing category (+18%), while Brandy (-51%) and Whiskies (-40%) are in structural decline.

02 GROWTH SHARE

Which categories are growing and which are in decline?

Growth-share bubble chart plotting 10-year CAGR against 2024 volume. White Spirits sits alone in positive territory above the zero line; every other category shows negative growth.

03 CHANNEL MIX

How is volume split between retail and bars/restaurants?

Stacked area chart of off-trade vs on-trade volume. On-trade was hit hardest by South Africa's Covid alcohol bans (-47% from 2019) and has not recovered.

04 TOP BRANDS

Who are the leading brands in the market?

Horizontal bar chart of top 10 brands by volume share. Smirnoff 1818 commands 16%, more than three times the next brand. Distell owns four of the top five.

05 PREMIUM MIX

Is the market premiumising?

100% stacked bar of price-tier mix over time. Vodka's premium and super-premium tiers have grown from roughly 8% to 12% of category volume over the past decade.

06 PRICING

Where does pricing power sit across categories?

Box plot of price per litre (ZAR) by category. Cognac commands the highest median (~R600/L), while Brandy and Cane sit below R250, confirming where margin headroom exists.
